2. Pet Oxygen Masks

A local woman is interested in looking for any fire departments who may want to get pet oxygen masks donated to them. She will be working on fund raising efforts to provide the masks to departments free of charge. She was inspired by a story of two girl scouts in CA who spearheaded a similar effort. If your department is interested, you are encouraged to contact Bernadette Nachand at Bnach0001@mail.ct.edu.

4. U.S. Fire Administration Report Offers Insights for Emergency Responders on Chlorine Releases

A report on test releases of liquefied compressed chlorine was published on Sept. 30 by Utah Valley University. Known as the "Jack Rabbit Project," the multiagency chlorine release experiments were conducted in part to help emergency responders meet the planning, tactical and operational challenges of a catastrophic Toxic Inhalation Hazard release. Staff from the U.S. Fire Administration's National Fire Academy (NFA) participated in the project to identify training gaps and opportunities that the NFA's hazardous materials curriculum can meet.

To learn more about the project's findings, including how long-practiced hazardous materials response strategies and tactics were validated visit:

7. New Haven Firefighters Local 825 Presents 2-Day Seminar

The Good of The Local 825 and The New Haven Firefighters Union Local 825 are proud to present a 2-day (Friday 11/3 & Saturday 11/4) seminar training event to benefit the Good of The Local which gives back to the New Haven community and New Haven Fire Fighters in need. We are offering 4 classes over two days with a catered brown bag lunch from the Bull & Swine Restaurant in New Haven.

Friday will start at 9am with Chief of the New Haven Fire Department John Alston presenting "Hi-Rise Operations". Whether your district has one 5 story building or 500 high rise buildings you must be prepared for the alarm. Next, Lt. Justin McCarthy (New Haven Fire) will be presenting his FDIC class "Down and Dirty Mayday".

Saturday we will be presenting an additional 2 classes starting at 9am. FF Jason Rivera (New Haven Fire) will be presenting his FDIC class "Overcoming Common Engine Company Mistakes and Fireground Problems". Assistant Chief John Woron (Middletown Fire) will then be presenting his class, "Developing Tactical Objectives from Smoke and Fire Conditions".

Following Friday and Saturday's classes we would like you to join us for a brotherhood event at the Bull and Swine restaurant located at 969 State St New Haven. Drink specials will be offered. www.bullswine.com
