The Women’s REACH Program is designed to provide outreach, engagement, case management, recovery coaching, community connections to treatment, and recovery support resources to women, in particular those who are pregnant and/or parenting.

Services

The Women’s REACH program provides female Recovery Navigators for pregnant or parenting women with substance use or co-occurring disorders.

The Women’s Recovery Navigator will provide education, advocacy, recovery coaching and case management to individuals choosing to work with a Recovery Navigator. Engagement in the program is voluntary.

Through their personal knowledge of the recovery community, each Navigator will help connect women to services aimed at enhancing their recovery journey while supporting their goals as they develop a safe support network.

Women’s Recovery Navigators will spend most of their time in the community outreaching to and engaging with women, establishing and maintaining community connections, and facilitating connections between the two.

Recovery Navigators help women develop collaborative relationships with community-based medical and behavioral health providers, including birthing hospitals, recovery programs, DCF, and the Office of Early Childhood.

Recovery navigators help women access the services they need to develop a personal recovery support network and become successful mothers.

The Women’s Recovery Navigator is not intended to replace clinical services; rather enhance them. Within their respective agencies, Navigators are part of the team.

A Plan of Safe Care is meant to be a community safety net for families affected by substance use. Ideally, the plan is established during pregnancy, prior to child welfare involvement.
