COMPOST CONFERENCE

March 23, 2020 | 8:30AM - 5PM

Hosted by Central Connecticut State University

This informative day will feature keynote speakers, breakout sessions, panel discussions, networking, exhibits, and a Q&A. This critical event will provide information and resources for farmers and municipalities to expand their leaf and/or homemade composting operations to include food scraps. Topics of workshops will include the benefits of soil health, conservation, food waste management, and climate adaptation. Compost manufacturing and utilization are vital in producing healthy soil, clean air and water, and a sustainable society.
