Commissioner Announces New Promotions and Appointments

Commissioner Theresa C. Lantz is proud to announce her appointments of Michael Lajoie as Director of Security and Major Jose Feliciano as the new warden of the Enfield Correctional Institution.

“Both Director Lajoie and Warden Feliciano bring a breadth of experience and success to their new positions,” said Commissioner Lantz. “As Warden of the Corrigan-Radgowski Correctional Center, Director Lajoie solidified the consolidation of two facilities with drastically different missions.

The newly appointed Director of Security, Michael Lajoie is congratulated by Commissioner Lantz.

From the Commissioner

I recently distributed to all staff roll calls the following reminder of our agency’s zero tolerance policy as it relates to racial and discriminatory incidents. If you have not been made aware of this memorandum, please make sure you read and understand it. Thank you for your continued adherence to insuring our work environment is healthy, supportive and based on the values necessary for success.

Zero Tolerance Policy

As a national model in the field of corrections, our agency and its staff are dedicated to the highest standards of ethical behavior. Completely contrary to what we stand for have been recent reported incidents of a racist and discriminatory nature, which remain under investigation. Please be reminded, per Administrative Directive 2.1, Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action, that the Connecticut Department of Correction will not tolerate acts of discrimination, harassment, or insulting behavior. We demand and expect a workplace free of any form of bigotry, racism or intolerance. As you have been instructed since the first days in the training academy, per Administrative Directive 2.17 Employee Conduct, we are to treat the public, staff and offenders with respect and dignity.

Our Mission

The Department of Correction shall protect the public, protect staff, and provide safe, secure and humane supervision of offenders with opportunities that support successful community reintegration.

New Appointments Cont’d

Warden Feliciano has served with distinction at every level of our agency, from minimum security pre-release facilities to the Northern Correctional Institution,” the Commissioner said.

Commissioner Lantz also made a number of reassignments within the wardens’ and majors’ ranks to serve the needs of the agency. Warden John Sieminski has been assigned to Corrigan-Radgowski CC, Warden Peter Murphy has been assigned to MacDougall-Walker CI, Warden Charles Lee has been assigned to Cheshire CI, Warden Lori Ricks has been assigned to Hartford CC, and Warden Daniel Martin has been assigned to York CI.

Additionally, she announced the following moves: Major Christina Polce to York CI, Major Carol Chapdelaine to MacDougall-Walker CI, Major Michelle Pidgeon to Enfield CI, Major James Foley to Bergin CI, and Major Karl Lewis to Williard-Cybulsiki CI.

“I know that together we will raise the agency to a higher standard of excellence, professionalism, and public confidence,” said Commissioner Lantz. The appointments and transfers are effective as of Friday, April 13th.

Warden Backs Staff at Inmate Trial

Testimony by Warden James Dzurenda of the Garner Correctional Institution, at the recent trial of an inmate who had seriously assaulted staff, reportedly influenced the court to impose a more substantial sentence. The trial involved the actions of inmate Charles Redshirt in June of 2005. In one incident he broke a counselor’s nose and cheek bone, bit a lieutenant and caused a third officer to break his wrist in trying to subdue the assault. Warden Dzurenda in his testimony, made clear just how dangerous Redshirt was to staff and indicated that the inmate was one of the very few inmates for which Commissioner Lantz has exercised a “dangerous exception” that requires he be housed at Northern CI. The outcome of the trial was a six-year sentence for Redshirt who had been due to EOS in two weeks. Warden Dzurenda was informed after the proceedings that it was his testimony and the staff presence in the courtroom that had convinced the court a more severe sentence was warranted in the attack.
2007 Teacher of the Year

Superintendent William B. Barber and the staff of Unified School District #1- Connecticut Department of Correction, are pleased to announce that Ms. Suzanne Silengo has been awarded the honor of being chosen as “Teacher of the Year.” Ms. Silengo, pictured at left, is currently assigned to the Cheshire Correctional Institution, and has been working as a State School Teacher for Unified School District #1, for 18 years. Her colleagues describe her as “thorough,” “consistent,” and “cooperative.” Her students use words such as “patient,” “positive,” and “upbeat” when they refer to her. In addition to her role as academic instructor, Ms. Silengo has initiated programs in her school that did not exist before, such as book clubs, external diploma classes and tutorial training. In her recommendation of Ms. Silenego for Teacher of the Year, School Principal Dottie Green stated, “Suzanne is a dedicated educator who always ensures that student needs are a priority. She works diligently to help all students experience success. Her 18 years of experience teaching have been and continue to be an asset to USD#1.”

Agency Good Neighbors

Bridgeport CC- Michael Weiner, Patient Care Manager at The Hospital of Saint Raphael in New Haven sent a letter to Warden Walter Ford which stated, “On behalf of the Hospital I would like to thank Correction Officer Dana Smith and the Quality of Work Life Committee at Bridgeport CC for their generous donation of coats to the Child Psychiatric Emergency Services Unit of the Hospital.” Warden Ford commended the committee for their generosity towards those in the community.

Brooklyn CI - In a selfless act, Correctional Counselor Sarah Chesters of Brooklyn CI recently participated in the “Wigs for Kids” program. Counselor Chesters is now sporting short hair after she graciously donated twelve inches of her hair to this wonderful cause. “Wigs for Kids” is a non-profit organization that has been serving children suffering from hair loss since 1980. The organization provides wigs to children that have lost their hair as a result of medical treatments, health conditions and burn accidents.

Total Supervised Population on April 15, 2007
23,645

On April 15, 2006 the population was 22,810

New Jersey- An investigation is looking into a staff baby shower at a facility during which inmates served food and carried the gifts to the woman’s car.

California- The correction officers’ union contends that a 14 percent raise over three years would put them behind other state and local law enforcement agencies.

Washington- The state has paid between $250,000 and $500,000 for an inmate’s liver transplant.

Nevada- About 1,600 inmates would be immediately eligible for release under a proposal that would double the time credits inmates earn for good behavior.
CT DOC Gang Unit - A National Model

Officials from the State of Washington Department of Corrections, including the Deputy Secretary, are the latest prison officials to come to Connecticut to study our system for the management of gangs. Developed chiefly by now Deputy Commissioner Brian K. Murphy in the early 1990’s, the national model for safety and securely handling security risk groups has been studied and utilized by a number of states including California, North Carolina, Texas, New Mexico, Maryland and Virginia, not to mention Great Britain’s prison system. The Washington State DOC staff was seeking assistance in dealing with a growing and increasingly violent gang presence among its inmate population. They spent several days in Connecticut with our agency’s Security Division staff and they toured the Northern Correctional Institution where the Close Custody program for gang members is conducted.

Installing Insulation

Working around insulation can be an aggravating experience. It can be very irritating to your skin. Some people also have trouble breathing normally when working with insulation. However, insulation is part of almost every modern construction job. This means if you are going to start a project, you will run across some type of insulation. If you have ever removed a ceiling and had the old insulation rain down on you, then you know how uncomfortable the rest of the workday was. Getting insulation in your face, in your clothes, and all over you can make finishing your day’s work a real struggle.

Now that you are all itchy, let’s talk about new installation of insulation. Installing new insulation is a very technical job, as anyone who has started out in construction as a laborer or trainee knows. It is one thing to install insulation properly and it is another to be competent enough to install it profitably. After 20 years in the construction business, I have never found a way to install insulation with employees at a cost, that is less than what I can pay a company that specializes in the installation of insulation. So before I start an insulation project and get all itchy, I call a professional that concentrates solely on the installation of insulation. A little extra cost to your project will save you a lot of itching and aggravation.

If you do decide to install insulation on your own, the following are installation tips. Before installation, be sure to have on a pair of goggles, gloves and a dust mask.

Information on MRSA

Recently, correctional staff from several facilities have voiced their concerns about MRSA infections involving incarcerated inmates, generating a number of questions. Dr. Edward Blanchette (UCMHC-DOC) has attempted to address the most common questions here. Greater understanding and knowledge about this type of infection will hopefully result in less anxiety amongst our staff and fewer cases in the inmate population.

What is MRSA?

MRSA (short for Methicillin Resistant Staphylococcus Aureus) refers to a Staph bacteria that has acquired resistance to certain antibiotics. This resistance means that some antibiotics normally used to treat Staph bacteria in the past will not be effective. There are common oral antibiotics, however, that can effectively treat MRSA. In general, Staph bacteria infections have always been rather common in the incarcerated population, but this type of antibiotic resistance is a fairly new development.

How does a MRSA infection present?

Most MRSA infections in the community and in a jail/prison setting present as skin or soft tissue infections, especially “boils” or abscesses. Early on, it may have the appearance of a spider bite. Later, the infected area is red, swollen, and painful and there may be pus or other drainage. Serious MRSA infections, the kind that has attracted the attention of the media, occur in already compromised, sick patients. Because of this, MRSA is a more serious problem in a hospital setting as opposed to a community, including places such as military housing, college dorms, or prisons.

In DOC, MRSA-infected patients are usually first seen in a jail setting at or shortly after intake. In other words, most of our new MRSA cases originate from the community. Not surprisingly, MRSA has been an occasional problem affecting inmates in the infirmary setting as well.

Does everyone who has MRSA on or in their body have active infection?

No. Some people carry MRSA in their nose or throat (nasopharyngeal carriage) but, in this area, infection is uncommon. These persons are called asymptomatic carriers and they are “colonized” with MRSA. While they do not have an active infection, they can spread the bacteria to others or even to themselves, e.g. skin follicles of the leg. This is the reason why MRSA infections can be recurrent in some individuals and how infection can spread to others from an unknown source.

Has MRSA infection become more common in the inmate population over the past few years?

Yes. In fact, MRSA infection was considered unusual a number of years ago even in hospitals. Now, MRSA infections have become much more common in the community, including DOC, and especially in hospitals and healthcare facilities. Facilities where large groups of people live and recreate together, such as college dorms, day-care centers, military barracks, prisons, and schools are all areas where MRSA infection has become much more common.

Has MRSA been a problem for correctional employees over the past few years?

Not so far. Although I have seen an increasing number of MRSA infections over the past few years, I am not aware of any outbreaks involving correctional officers. The spread of MRSA is most likely to occur between individuals that have frequent, close contact. Inmates that live together, work together, and play sports together have the type of contact that can spread MRSA. Correctional officers do not have this type of contact unless they are responding to inmate altercations, cell extractions, or other activity that carries the risk of close, personal contact.

How can correctional staff protect themselves against MRSA infection?

By far, the most important measures are good handwashing practices and the wearing of gloves when inmate contact is anticipated. These basic measures will effectively stop MRSA spread as well as other potential pathogens such as HIV and viral hepatitis.

In addition, the DOC Medical Units have been instructed to call Dr. Edward Blanchette if MRSA has been confirmed in any inmate. He will then review several issues regarding these cases personally, including antibiotic administration, wound care, and temporary housing changes if appropriate.
Did You Know?...Cont’d
1. Open the packages by cutting lengthwise through the side panel. Be careful to avoid cutting the product or facing. The insulation will quickly expand to its full volume when the bag is opened.
2. Rolls must be measured and cut to fit into wall cavities. Cut insulation about an inch wider than the space using a sharp utility knife against a safe backstop, such as an unfinished floor or other smooth, flat surface. Always cut on the unfaced side of the batt.
3. Cut the insulation to fit properly. Don’t double it over or compress it. Compression changes the R-value of the insulation.
4. Gently push insulation into the cavity so that it sits all the way, especially at the corner and edges. Then, fluff it to its full expansion by pulling it forward to fill the depth of the cavity. The fit should be snug.
5. With faced insulation make sure the vapor retarder is facing the conditioned interior space, unless building codes specify otherwise.
6. Allow friction to hold the insulation in place. Or you can staple the flanges of faced insulation to the insides or face of the joists. (Stapling on the inside is preferred by many drywallers because it leaves the edges of the framing members easier to locate. However, your local building codes may require you to overlap the flanges and staple them to the edges of the framing members.)
7. Take care not to stretch the facing too tight as you staple, which can over compress the insulation, and avoid gaps and puckers.
8. Secure floor insulation with wire fasteners, sometimes called “lightning rods.” Press the fasteners so they bow up gently against the subflooring without compressing it. Space the fasteners at least six inches from each end of the batt and 12” – 24” apart.
9. When installing rolls in an unfinished attic or other large open area, simply unroll the insulation in place.
10. Wherever there are adjacent rolls, make sure they fit snugly together.

Condolences
Director Richard Miele and staff of the Correctional Transportation Unit and Warden Peter Murphy and the staff of MacDougall-Walker CI are saddened to announce the passing of Jose Martinez, father of Officer Edwin Martinez (CTU) and Officer Hector Martinez (MWCI).

Director Anthony Bruno and the staff of the Religious Services Unit and Warden Eileen Higgins and the staff of Bergin CI are saddened to announce the passing of Jesse Williams, son of Chaplain Chuck Williams.
