DIVISION OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

The Shooting Task Forces/Cold Case Units are part of a two-pronged, collaborative approach to address urban violence.

- 1. Effective law enforcement to “get the bad guys off the streets”
- 2. Preventive programs to address the conditions that contribute to urban violence

DIVISION OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

The shooting task forces are built on the highly successful cold case model – bring together the resources of law enforcement agencies at all levels of government to work collaboratively.

The Collaborative Approach

- Recognizes that crime does not stop at the city/town line
- Produces maximum benefit from minimal resources contributed by partners
- Provides excellent training opportunities for municipal officers
- Allows collaboration with prosecutors to provide stronger cases for prosecution

SHOOTING TASK FORCES

The shooting task force concept rests on the understanding that urban gun violence often is driven by a vicious cycle of retaliatory shootings.

Experienced urban police officers recognize that shootings – even those that cause no fatality or injury – often generate a responsive shootings against a rival gang, crew, or loose association of neighborhood groups.

Unfortunately, because of the volume of crime in some major cities, police departments are not able to aggressively and thoroughly investigate non-fatal shootings.

DIVISION OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

The shooting task force then investigates those shootings as aggressively as possible in an effort to arrest the shooters and their accomplices, thereby breaking the cycle of retaliatory shootings that likely would follow and removing dangerous persons from the community.
