Governor Ned Lamont put forth several new proposals for Connecticut’s Fiscal Year 2023 budget during the 2022 State of the State address given on Wednesday, February 9th. These proposals will make a difference in people’s lives across Connecticut in five different ways:

1. Capitalizing on Good-Paying Jobs
   More than $75M for workforce development, connecting the jobs of tomorrow with the job trainings of today.

2. Upgrading Our Aging Infrastructure
   Transforming federal investment of nearly $1B a year for the next five years into upgrades of Connecticut’s roads, bridges, broadband internet, energy efficiency, storm resiliency, and clean energy.

3. Improving Affordability
   Tax credits for homeowners. Tax cuts for car owners, retirees, and people with student loans. Cap the cost of domestic prescription drugs while allowing the safe importation of less expensive prescription drugs from Canada. Require transparency by home sellers and landlords in monthly energy costs.

4. Continuing Our Nation-Leading Response to the COVID-19 Pandemic
   Ending the statewide school mask mandate, instead giving local school boards choice. Continue responding quickly and efficiently to changing circumstances by providing tools to keep people safe, including vaccines and boosters, quality masks, and self-tests.

5. Tackling Crime Through Public Safety and Accountability
   Putting tens of millions of dollars into towns for more police officers with greater diversity, while also getting illegal guns used to commit violent crime off our streets.

The Connecticut Difference
Since taking office in January 2019, Governor Lamont has brought Connecticut back from the edge of a fiscal cliff, facing a $3.7B budget deficit, all while dealing with a once in a century pandemic. Today, instead of raising taxes, like previous governors did for decades, generating revenue from families and businesses to cover the deficit, the Governor is suggesting cutting taxes for working- and middle-class families thanks to a $1.4B surplus and a maxed out rainy-day fund.

Governor Lamont’s legislative agenda for the upcoming session is focused on making a meaningful, equitable difference for workers, families, minority and vulnerable residents, small businesses, our environment, and on a general belief in the direction Connecticut is headed.
