Executive Summary

The Connecticut Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations (ACIR) is pleased to submit 2026's supplement to the ACIR's Compendium of Statutory and Regulatory Mandates on Municipalities in Connecticut. Like 2025's supplement, this report is a compilation of a single year's statutory and regulatory additions or other changes to the ACIR's most recent full Compendium (2024), which includes all mandates identified to that point in time.

Many of the mandates listed in ACIR compendiums did not require an immediate increase in spending by most municipalities. They often were not flagged as mandates by the General Assembly's Office of Fiscal Analysis because they were expected to be completed without a need for additional municipal staff or other resources. Even if considered insignificant individually, however, their cumulative impact can be very significant.

Recent ACIR reports mention the commission's interest in a more focused study of mandates, what members refer to as a "deep dive." The ACIR is collaborating with other organizations to study a few previously enacted mandates to learn how the impacts compare with predictions at the time of mandate adoption and how impacts vary among municipalities.

The ACIR believes deep dives, even just a few per year, will assist state leaders in refining new requirements to reduce local costs of achieving statewide policy goals. Our municipalities and the state itself will benefit when activities that are more appropriately handled at the municipal level can be achieved at lower local cost.

The ACIR will publish one more compendium supplement before the next full compendium is due in 2028. The ACIR also publishes legislative session mandates reports that identify the mandates and mandate reductions of each year's legislative session.

Please feel free to contact us at acir@ct.gov if you have any questions or suggestions regarding the current report or other work of the ACIR.

Sincerely yours,

Matt Hart, Chair designate

Stephen Stephanou, Vice Chair

Compendium of Statutory and Regulatory Mandates on Municipalities in CT: 2026 Supplement
a report by the Connecticut Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations

ACIR compendiums and supplements are prepared and issued in accordance with Sec. 2-79a of the CT General Statutes (CGS). A full compendium, identifying all known statutory and regulatory mandates, is published every fourth year and a supplement like this is published each of the three intervening years. This is the second supplement following 2024's full compendium and there will be a third in 2027, followed by the next full compendium in 2028.

The state's authority to create mandates originates in the state constitution, which authorizes the state to delegate certain responsibilities to municipalities. The constitution's Article Tenth, specifically, establishes that the General Assembly "shall by law delegate such legislative authority as from time to time it deems appropriate to towns, cities and boroughs relative to the powers, organization and form of government of such political subdivisions."

Over the years, the state has built a mosaic of authorizations, organizational frameworks, and requirements prescribing aspects of the structure and operation of local government. The more highly prescriptive a state requirement, however, the less flexibility a municipality will have to adapt to its individual and evolving needs. State aid to municipalities is a significant portion of the state budget, but state mandates can constrain a municipality's ability to fund the services its residents and businesses expect to receive in exchange for local tax dollars. Connecticut's uneven distributions of property wealth and of tax-exempt property, in tandem with the state's heavy reliance on property taxes, heightens the burden of mandates on many municipalities.

The ACIR has a long-standing goal of reducing the local burden of mandates, but cautions against viewing its list of mandates as a "hit list" of statutes or regulations to be eliminated. The state and municipalities share an interest in the local administration of certain functions for which statewide uniformity or standards of performance are desired. People disagree about the desirability of specific mandates, but a level of state direction of local responsibility is often appropriate from a legal, social, and/or practical viewpoint. There will continue to be much debate about the balancing of these various interests against the associated costs.

State Mandate Definition, History, and Notes on this Report

The term "state mandate" is defined in Sec. 2-32b of the statutes as being:

...any constitutional, statutory or executive action that requires a local government to establish, expand or modify its activities in such a way as to necessitate additional expenditures from local revenues, excluding any order issued by a state court and any legislation necessary to comply with a federal mandate

Types of Mandates

This compendium is organized into multiple parts and sections as follows:

Part I - includes the list of statutory mandates adopted by the General Assembly and is divided into three sections to reflect three different types of mandates:

Section A - includes the statutes that impose mandates specifically on municipalities;

Section B - includes statutes that mandate actions only if a municipality chooses to perform a service (although that service might be essentially unavoidable);

Section C - includes statutes that impose mandates on all entities performing certain functions including, but not limited to, municipalities.

The ACIR estimates fiscal impacts only for the Section A category of statutory mandates and uses the following criteria for characterizing the fiscal impact assessment of mandates:

Minor:	estimated to be less than 0.1% of the municipal operating budget
Moderate:	estimated to be 0.1 - 1% of the municipal operating budget
Major:	estimated to be more than 1% of the municipal operating budget

For instance, if a town budget is $20 million, a mandate would be identified as Major if the cost could exceed $200,000. A Moderate mandate would be anything that could cost between $20,000 and $200,000, and a mandate is considered Minor if it is estimated to cost less than $20,000. Those thresholds would be 10x higher if the municipal budget were 10x higher. This rudimentary framework has guided the ACIR's estimates of local impacts for many years because far more rigorous study would be necessary to better understand how each mandate impacts 169 uniquely-organized municipalities.

It should also be noted that while many mandates are characterized as minor and may appear to impose a negligible additional burden, the many minor impacts have a substantial cumulative impact. Many minor education mandates are adopted under the assumption that existing school district employees can handle them at no additional cost, which could appear reasonable when a new requirement is viewed in isolation. In reality, the accumulation of mandates lead to school districts having additional employees to handle mandated requirements.

Unlike the ACIR's session mandate reports, each ACIR compendium also addresses regulatory mandates

Part II - includes the list of regulatory mandates adopted by state agencies and is divided into two sections;

Section A - includes the regulations that mandate actions on the part of municipalities;

Section B - includes regulations that mandate actions if a municipality chooses to perform a service which is not mandated (although the service might be essentially unavoidable);

The ACIR does not track regulatory mandates corresponding to Section C statutory mandates.

Mandate History

Subdivision (c) of the ACIR's implementing statute specifies that the compendium is to include "the date of original enactment or issuance along with a brief description of the history of the mandate." Many sections of statutes imposing mandates have experienced few or even no changes throughout their history while others have been revised multiple times, sometimes even within a single year. Due to the number of technical or minor revisions, the itemization of such changes eventually accounted for approximately 200 pages in the full mandate compendium and, worse, the amount of space dedicated to any particular mandate reflected the number of times it had been revised, not how significant it actually was.

The General Assembly website's Browse Statutes feature provides a much better perspective on the history of state statutes, which includes the vast majority of mandates, especially the more significant ones. State statutes are organized by title with Title 9, for example, including statutes regarding elections. Each title is further divided into chapters and Chapter 145, one of the chapters in Title 9, includes sections of statutes regarding absentee voting. The text of each section of the statutes is in black font. The ACIR similarly identifies mandates by title, chapter, and section and provides a link to each chapter that includes a section imposing a mandate. The details of a mandate will be found there.

The General Assembly website also provides a detailed history of each section of statutes. The black text of the statute is followed by a list in brown font of the bills that created and modified that section of statutes. If the section has been modified since its original adoption, the brown text will be followed by a detailed description of those changes in purple font.

In addition to the information regarding legislative history, the General Assembly website includes text in red font for some of the statutes. The red font identifies court cases that have interpreted or cited the statute. The amount of effort necessary to provide the Compendiums have never provided information regarding court decisions, but such information can be significant, especially for municipal activities that are especially likely to be litigated, such as many sections of statute in the zoning chapter of Title 8. The General Assembly website's presentation of legislative and judicial history is superior to what was previously provided in mandate compendiums, so the ACIR has eliminated that from its reports and instead points out where the information can be found.

Further Notes on this Report

When reviewing this report, please be mindful that it is a guide to state requirements meeting the definition of a municipal mandate, not a list of all requirements imposed by a public act, special act, or regulation adopted in 2025. Statutes are available through the General Assembly website at <https://www.cga.ct.gov/current/pub/titles.htm>. Be aware that there can be a significant lag between the effective date of a new requirement and that requirement appearing at the linked site. Regulations are available through the CT eRegulations System at <https://eregulations.ct.gov/eRegsPortal/>.

Regulatory mandates differ from statutory mandates in that they are contained in formal state regulations that have been adopted in accordance with the Uniform Administrative Procedures Act. Regulations implement specific sections of the Connecticut General Statutes and tend to be more detailed. Regulations cannot be enacted without prior statutory authority, but the ACIR has at times found regulations for which the underlying statute had been repealed. In the normal course of events, state agencies will repeal such a regulation in accordance with state law, but there can be a substantial period of time between the two events.
