Definition of Supplier Offers - See, Decision dated March 16, 2011, in Docket No. 10-06-24, p. 20.

Variable Price - price that is subject to change at predefined intervals within a one month period or within one complete billing cycle (e.g., daily, weekly, or bi-weekly).

Monthly Variable Price - price that does not change for 30 days, a complete calendar month or one complete billing cycle.

Fixed Price - price that does not change for a specified period of time of not less than 90 days, three calendar months or three complete billing cycles.

Renewable - offer for a product that exceeds the applicable minimum Renewable Portfolio Standard requirement.

Promotional Price - a price that is not available to current customers or is designed to increase customer enrollment with a Supplier. Promotional prices will not be used to calculate potential savings on the Rate Board.

Note that all Promotional offers must include the duration of the promotional offer, as well as the price plan and price that the customer will be placed on when the promotional period ends.

Each price filing must reflect all offers currently available to customers.
