INSPECTION

During the year 1941 a total of 1,519 samples were examined. The number includes official samples of commercial feeding stuffs and of vitamin D carriers, and other materials as indicated in the following summary:

Concentrated feeding stuffs, official samples .....	797
Vitamin D carriers, official samples .....	42
Feeds and fodder materials examined for individuals .....	98
Biological specimens examined for poisons .....	86
Pasture grass samples examined for Storrs Station .....	409
Experimental rations, etc., for Poultry Dept., Storrs Station..	19
Native seeds, grains and berries as feed for wild birds .....	62
Check feeds, A. F. C. O. ....	6
Total .....	1519

All samples examined for the Storrs Station are in connection with investigations carried on by departments of that Station and are not for discussion here.

A summary of the results of analyses of official samples of commercial feeding stuffs, other than cod liver oils, is as follows:

Total number of samples .....	797
Samples deficient in:
one item .....	53
two items .....	1
three items .....	0
Percentage of samples meeting guaranties in all respects....	93
Total guaranties made .....	2,387 <sup>1</sup>
Guaranties not met:
protein .....	13
fiber .....	7
fat .....	35
Percentage of guaranties met .....	98

Microscopic examination of all mixed feed samples was made; no significant contamination with weed seed was found and the ingredients were substantially as claimed.

Analyses are given in Table 1.

Vitamin D Carriers

R. B. HUBBELL AND E. M. BAILEY

Forty-two samples of poultry and cod liver oil and other vitamin D carriers were examined during the year.

In connection with the three substandard samples of Liberty fortified cod liver oil, it should be explained that these were from the same lot as the sample taken late in 1940 and included in our report last year. Our information is that all represent one and the same consignment of oil, as supplied to the distributor, Apothecaries Hall Co., by their supply house.

Of 42 samples tested, 24 were rated as satisfactory, 12 sufficiently close to the guaranty to be passed, and 6 were definitely below guaranty. The percentage of samples below guaranty is 14. This compares with 30 percent in 1937, 15 percent in 1938, 7 percent in 1939, and 29 percent in 1940.

Two samples, Gorton's Vitamin A and D Feeding Oil 85 and Gorton's G. P. Cod Liver Oil 400, were below guarantees by duplicate trials in each case. Portions of our samples were supplied to the manufacturer who reported results indicating the claimed potencies in both cases.

Miscellaneous Feeds and Fodder Materials

Ninety-eight samples of feeds and fodder materials submitted by individuals were examined. One of these was a commercial wild bird cake consisting of whole grains and seeds in a suet base. The analysis is given for reference.

Analysis No. 1064. Moisture 9.3 percent; ash 4.2 percent; protein 8.81 percent; fiber 4.59 percent; nitrogen-free extract 34.49 percent; fat 38.59 percent.

Other samples require no special comment.

Examination of Specimens for Poisons

C. E. SHEPARD, D. C. WALDEN AND E. M. BAILEY

During the year, 86 biological specimens have been examined for poisons. These specimens have been submitted chiefly by the Department of Animal Diseases of the Storrs Station, by the Commissioner on Domestic Animals, by state police officers, by game wardens and by veterinarians in connection with investigations of suspected poisoning of domestic animals.

In 52 specimens our findings were negative and in 34 they were positive. Negative results are of some value in that they exclude the common volatile, metallic or alkaloidal poisons and indicate the probability of other causes. Positive results may, or may not, be the explanation of sickness or mortality depending on the results of other phases of the investigations. These, in many cases, are carried on by the agencies or individuals submitting the specimens.

In 17 of the cases where chemical findings were positive, our analyses were supplementary to pathological examinations made by the Department of Animal Diseases at Storrs. In one of these a diaphragmatic hernia was found. Two pounds of Epsom salt had been given to the animal (a pig), in treatment. Chemical tests revealed nothing of significance in the stomach contents except much sulphate, and the medication may have contributed to the condition found in that case. In the remaining 16 cases pathological explanations were indefinite or lacking, thus giving added weight to the chemical poisons found as probable causes of mortality. The poisons found were lead, arsenic, strychnine and an unidentified alkaloid.

The poison most frequently found was lead; it was present in ten specimens. In two of these stomach contents only was submitted, but the large amounts of 634 and 12,600 p. p. m. were found, the source of the lead being undoubtedly paint. In three others the stomach contents contained 6, 23.4 and 16 p. p. m. and the livers 7.4, 1 and 19 p. p. m. in the same order. In four, the livers only were submitted, and the absorbed lead present ranged from 4.2 to 28.6 p. p. m. In one, 20.1 p. p. m. of lead and 6.5 of arsenic were present in the stomach contents.

In the 17 specimens where chemical analyses were not supplemented by pathological examinations, the poisons were the same in kind as those already mentioned, with the addition of cyanide. In one specimen cyanide was detected by chemical tests. In another, laurel leaves were observed in the stomach contents, but tests for anaromdotoxin in the contents itself were negative.

Again, lead was the poison most frequently found, paint in two cases being clearly indicated as the source. The magnitudes of grosser amounts ranged from 73 to 516 p. p. m. in the stomach contents, these being associated with absorbed lead (in the livers) in amounts ranging from 12 to 57.6 p. p. m. Lesser amounts in stomach contents ranged from 1 to 5 p. p. m. accompanied, however, by 5 to 21.4 p. p. m. in the livers.

The finding of lead alone suggests paint as the source; the inclination of animals to lick paint cans or freshly painted surfaces is well known. Lead and arsenic together suggest spray materials as the probable source. Arsenic alone may have been from arsenical weed killers or from poisoned feed or bait distributed with malicious intent or exposed through carelessness. The same is true of strychnine (and thallium, detected in previous years,) which is an active ingredient of rodent exterminators and ant pastes. Cyanide may disappear from tissues relatively soon and escape detection unless examination is made promptly. However, we have detected it after the lapse of a considerable time.

Residues of an alkaloidal nature are often obtained from biological specimens in the usual extraction procedure. Except in the case of strychnine, their identities are difficult to establish. In the past year a basic substance giving the color reactions of veratrin was found in a specimen of stomach contents, suggesting possible plant poisoning. (Veratrin is a poisonous principle in wild hellebore). In another specimen an alkaloid resembling aconitine in many of its reactions was isolated, but its identity was not established. In previous years atropin (poisonous principle of deadly nightshade) and nicotine have been isolated and identified.

In a few instances laboratory findings have been supplemented by visits to pasture lands to discover poisonous plants. Thus a laboratory identification of atropin was substantiated by finding a luxurious growth of deadly nightshade which had evidently been browsed upon.

And, more recently, water hemlock was discovered in early pasturage where several cows had become sick and some had died. In this case laboratory tests of biological material would probably have failed to suggest any explanation.

An autopsy by a competent veterinarian or pathologist is advisable in all cases, because such examination will often determine or indicate the cause of death and serve as an aid to chemical examination, or perhaps obviate the need for it.

Wild Bird Feed

Forty-five samples of native seeds, grains, berries, etc., were submitted by the State Board of Fisheries and Game and by the University of Connecticut. The investigation represents a joint survey of potential sources of food for wild bird life carried on by the agencies named. The analyses are recorded here for reference purposes and are given in Table 3.

Because of related interest, analyses of the seed and pulp of skunk cabbage are cited from a previous publication (Conn. Exp. Sta. Bul. 447, p. 468, 1941).<sup>1</sup>

Analyses of seed and pulp of skunk cabbage are as follows:

Check Feeds

Six samples of feeding stuffs were analyzed in a collaborative program of check feed analyses sponsored by the Association of American Feed Control Officials.
