District Reopen Model Selection for the 2020-21 School Year

Introduction and Caveats

The Connecticut State Department of Education (CSDE) collected information from each district on their reopen model for the 2020-21 school year between July 31, 2020 and August 11, 2020. Many districts are still in the process of making a final determination of their reopen model; they are in the midst of surveying their students, families, and educators, and meeting with their Board members and other stakeholders to determine the best approach for their district. Therefore, the model choices presented here should be considered as the best available information as of August 11, 2020 that may change by the time school reopens in a few weeks in most districts across the state.

Reopen Model Summary

Of the 199 school districts in Connecticut, 113 (56.8 percent) expect to reopen fully in-person from day 1 or within four weeks of school reopening. Another 82 districts (41.2 percent) expect to reopen in a hybrid model from day 1 or within four weeks; in about 10 of these districts, the hybrid approach is planned in the high school and/or middle school grades with elementary grade students expected to attend fully in-person. Only four districts (two percent) expect to be fully remote for the foreseeable future.

Reopen Model	Number of Districts	Percent of Districts
In-Person on Day 1 or within Four Weeks	113	56.8
