1. This list does not constitute the State of Connecticut, the Department of Energy and Environmental Protection, or any other entity's endorsement or recommendation of any individual or testing company. This list is not comprehensive, as it only includes testing companies that have properly notified the Department and conducted Stage I vapor recovery tests in Connecticut over the last several years. Additionally, the names, addresses, and contact information is based on the latest information received by the Connecticut Department of Energy and Environmental Protection's Air Vapor Program, therefore the information may no longer be accurate.
