The Connecticut TVTP Symposium is a full-day event bringing together state and local officials, educators, public safety professionals, and community partners to strengthen collaboration in preventing targeted violence. The symposium will feature keynote speakers, and breakout sessions exploring best practices in behavioral threat assessment and management (BTAM), interagency coordination, community awareness, and policy implementation. Participants will gain practical tools, insights from national experts, and opportunities to build partnerships across disciplines—empowering Connecticut communities to proactively address emerging threats and create safer, more resilient environments.

Attendees Will

Unite with Leaders

- Connect with state and local partners
- Strengthen cross-discipline relationships
- Gain best practices across Connecticut

Turn Commitment into Action

- Learn proactive threat prevention strategies
- Gain practical tools and resources

- Be empowered to act

Build a Safer Future

- Advance prevention of targeted violence
- Support communities through resilience efforts
- Create safer, stronger Connecticut communities

Attendees

To ensure meaningful discussion and networking, registration is limited to those with a professional connection to targeted violence prevention, including elected officials, school and school district leadership and administration, public safety leaders, and violence prevention practitioners. If you are unsure whether this event is right for you, please contact the organizers before registering.

Speakers

Speakers are from local, state, and national level with expertise in the fields of targeted violence and terrorism prevention.
