The Connecticut Targeted Violence and Terrorism Prevention (TVTP) Symposium is a full-day event bringing together state and local officials, educators, public safety professionals, and community partners to strengthen collaboration in preventing targeted violence. The symposium will feature keynote speakers and breakout sessions exploring best practices in behavioral threat assessment and management (BTAM), interagency coordination, community awareness, and policy implementation. Participants will gain practical tools, insights from national experts, and opportunities to build partnerships across disciplines, empowering Connecticut communities to proactively address emerging threats and create safer, more resilient environments.
