

Checklist of Documents to Bring to Court After Release

After your release, if you are going to court regarding a child support order, you will need to bring the following documents, if you have them.

Income Verification

- Thirteen weeks pay stubs
- Unemployment verification
- Financial affidavit
- Inform support enforcement officer of other children you have living with you

Helpful Financial Information

- Health insurance information cost for self and children
- Court orders that affect your financial situation (alimony) and receipts to verify payment
- Verification of union or other employment related dues
- Special education costs
- Daycare costs (receipts or letter from day care provider)

If You Have a Medical Condition

- Medical bills
- Doctor's letter stating medical condition
- Doctor's letter for spouse stating medical condition

