Title of Proposal: An Act Making Minor Revisions to Statutes Regarding Bond-Financed Housing Programs and the Homelessness Prevention and Response Fund

Statutory Reference: 8-37qq(a)(2); 8-37mm

Proposal Summary:

Relative to CGS 8-37qq, this modified provision updates the definition of “administrative expense” to add references to the Affordable Housing (“Flex”) program and the Housing Trust Fund (“HTF”) Program to the list of other bond financed state housing programs currently specified in the statute. The purpose of the definition is to describe administrative expenses that can be paid from time to time with funds in the agency’s Housing Repayment and Revolving Loan Fund (“HRRLF”). In general terms, the HRRLF is the account into which repayments and other receivables associated with the agency’s capital funding programs are deposited, nearly all of which is then used for short-term lending on a revolving basis. The original intent of the statute was to allow for a portion of the balance of the HRRLF to be used to pay costs associated with the agency’s capital funding programs. Over the past decade, the state shifted away from appropriating affordable housing capital funding under the narrow statutory programs currently listed in the definition. Instead, nearly all of the state’s affordable housing capital funding is appropriated under the Flex and HTF programs. Adding the references to these two programs to the definition will ensure that HRRLF funds can be used, as originally contemplated, to pay appropriate administrative expenses associated with the capital funding programs that are actually in use by the agency.

Relative to CGS 8-37mm, this change concerns the Homeless Prevention and Response Fund (“HPRF”). The purpose of the HPRF is to provide funding in exchange for units that will be restricted for use by participants in a rapid rehousing program (an intervention designed to get individuals and families into stable housing quickly when the needs of those individuals and families are relatively minimal, such as overcoming a temporary financial hardship) or individuals and families in need of supportive housing. The program has great potential for helping the state reduce and end homelessness through a cost effective approach. The original statutory language, however, created unintended differences in the way funding could be used to subsidize the units available under each of these two programs. The modified text is not only clearer but also substantively important because it allows HPRF funds to be used in the same way regardless of whether the units will be occupied by rapid rehousing program participants or supportive housing program participants. Providing consistency in the way the funding can be used will simplify the administration of the HPRF and likely increase the number of units that can be subsidized and restricted under the program and, therefore, the number of individuals and families who can benefit from it.
