

City Shapes

By Diana Murray

Enjoy the Book Together

- There is so much going on in this book! After you read it together, go back and look at the different scenes. What's happening in each scene? What is everyone doing?
- The author uses interesting language to create the city for you. What words does she use to help you see, hear, smell, touch, and even taste the city?

Make Personal Connections

- How do you feel about cities? Do you live in one, or have you ever visited one? If not, would you like to? Why or why not?
- Look around right now, wherever you are! Can you find one example of each of the shapes in the book? Maybe you can even describe each one in a special way, like the author does!

Literacy Tip

Is this a book that tells a story, or a book that gives information? Actually, that's kind of a trick question—this book does both! It tells a story about a girl who lives in the city, but it also teaches about shapes.

City Shapes

By Diana Murray

Show off what you know about shapes!

In the boxes below, either draw the shape that's named,
or fill in the blanks to name the shape.

(Ask for help with the spelling if you need it!)

