Introduction from Secretary of the State Thomas

Dear Connecticut Residents:

In 2026, America turns 250. It's a big moment, and a great time to remember that our system of government isn't just something we learn about. It's something we live every day.

Civics shows up all around us: in our communities, our conversations, and the decisions that shape our daily lives. And when you understand how it works, you're better prepared to speak up for the issues that matter to you.

That's why in honor of our state's America 250th celebrations, our office created the Flat Roger Sherman Project, inspired by one of Connecticut's own Founding Fathers. Roger Sherman was the only person in American history to sign all four of the nation's founding documents: the Continental Association, the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation, and the U.S. Constitution.

Sherman wasn't flashy. He didn't seek attention. But he was respected for his integrity, his practicality, and his ability to bring people together. He believed in strong communities, thoughtful governance, and the idea that everyday citizens should have a voice in how they are governed.

Roger Sherman reminds us that you don't have to be famous, wealthy, or extraordinary to make a difference. Flat Roger is for everyone, because we can all help shape history.

Within this packet, you'll find everything you need to take your personalized version of Flat Roger on an adventure. Be sure to use the hashtags #CTFlatRoger, #CTSOTS, and #CT250 when you post on social media. We can't wait to see where you take him!

Sincerely,

Stephanie Thomas
Connecticut Secretary of the State

Flat Fact from Secretary Thomas

Civic engagement isn't something that happens somewhere else. It happens all around you, every day.

Who was Roger Sherman?

Roger Sherman wasn't born into wealth or privilege.

He didn't attend elite schools, and he wasn't known for fiery speeches or larger-than-life charisma.

In fact, in many ways, he was just an everyday person — someone who worked hard, learned as he went, and cared deeply about his community.

And yet, his impact on American history is extraordinary.

Sherman was born in 1721 in Massachusetts and grew up in a modest family. When his father died, Sherman helped support his family by working as a shoemaker. He had little formal education, but he was determined to learn.

With the help of a local minister, who became his mentor, he began educating himself: reading everything he could get his hands on, studying law, and developing the knowledge that would shape his future.

That self-made path defined Sherman's life. He moved to New Milford, Connecticut, opened a store, became a surveyor, and eventually a lawyer, despite never attending law school. From there, he stepped into public service, not for recognition, but because he believed in doing his part.

And he did more than his part.

Roger Sherman is the only person in American history to sign all four of the nation's founding documents:

- The Continental Association
- The Declaration of Independence
- The Articles of Confederation
- The U.S. Constitution

These weren't just signatures. They were the result of years of steady, thoughtful work behind the scenes.

While others like Hamilton, Franklin, and Jefferson often took center stage, Sherman was known as a problem-solver. In 1787, when disagreements at the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia between large and small states threatened to derail the process of creating a new framework of government for the United States, it was Sherman who helped craft what became known as the "Great Compromise." His idea created a two-part legislature — one based on population (the U.S. House of Representatives) and one with equal representation (the U.S. Senate) — balancing power in a way that still defines our government today.

Sherman wasn't flashy. He didn't seek attention. But he was respected for his integrity, his practicality, and his ability to bring people together. He believed in strong communities, thoughtful governance, and the idea that everyday citizens should have a voice in how they are governed.

That's what makes his story so powerful and so relatable.

Roger Sherman reminds us that you don't have to be famous, wealthy, or extraordinary to make a difference. With curiosity, hard work, and a commitment to others, an "everyday" person can help shape history.

That's what Roger Sherman did, and what you can do, too!

Flat Fact from Secretary Thomas

Sometimes history can feel a little "ho, hum." But this isn't that kind of project. This is your chance to get out, look around, and see how civic life is happening all around you—no textbook required.

10 Fun Facts About Roger Sherman

1 He's the only person to sign all four founding documents.

That's the Declaration of Independence, Articles of Confederation, U.S. Constitution, and Continental Association.

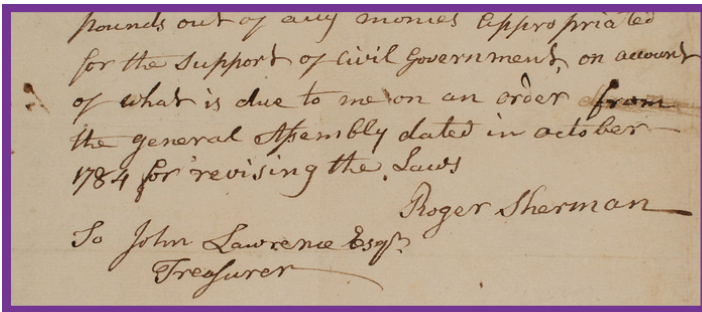

2 He didn't go to college.

Roger Sherman was largely self-taught. He learned by reading books, often late at night, while working full-time.

3 He started out as a shoemaker.

Before shaping a nation, he was literally making shoes. He later became a surveyor, merchant, lawyer, and judge.

4 He helped solve one of the biggest arguments in U.S. history.

At the Constitutional Convention, large and small states were fighting. Sherman helped create the "Great Compromise," which gave us the U.S. House and Senate.

5 He wasn't flashy, but people trusted him.

He wasn't known for big speeches like some other Founding Fathers. He was known for being practical, thoughtful, and steady. And people listened.

Flat Fact from Secretary Thomas

History is more than dates and documents. It's also the choices people made. Unlike many in the 1700s, including some Founding Fathers, Roger Sherman did not support slavery, offering insight into the values he brought to public life.

6 He held a LOT of jobs in government.

He served as a judge, state legislator, congressman, and New Haven's first mayor.

7 He believed everyday people should have a voice.

Sherman strongly supported representative government, meaning leaders should reflect the people they serve.

8 He helped shape how elections work today.

He believed states, and not the federal government, should run their elections, which became part of the U.S. Constitution.

9 He raised a big family.

He had 15 children, so he understood busy, everyday life. But he still made civic engagement a priority.

10 He proved you don't have to be famous to make history.

He's not the best-known Founding Father, but his ideas are still part of how our government works every single day.

One of the most famous paintings of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, which hangs in the U.S. Capitol Rotunda and is shown on the back of the $2 bill. See the arrow pointing to Roger Sherman. The oil on canvas was painted by Connecticut artist John Trumbull of Lebanon. A smaller version can be viewed at the Yale University Art Gallery in New Haven.

A PROJECT CREATED BY THE CONNECTICUT SECRETARY OF THE STATE, FLAT ROGER SHERMAN IS inspired by the Flat Stanley Project, which was started in 1995 by a 3rd-grade teacher to encourage letter-writing between students as they shared where Flat Stanley accompanied them. Unlike Flat Stanley, who was originally a book character, Flat Roger Sherman is based on a real person: one of the nation's most important (and often overlooked) Founding Fathers, who grew up and lived in Connecticut.

Flat Stanley, the inspiration for Flat Roger Sherman

Roger Sherman was the only person to sign all four of America's founding documents. He believed in participation, compromise, and making sure different voices were heard.

The system he helped shape — where people choose their leaders and have a say in decisions — still guides our country today. With Flat Roger, you can explore how that system shows up in your life!
